Negotiation Details

International Student Association

The International Student Association (ISA) is a multinational organisation that develops leadership skills through their internal leadership programmes. In the ISA, students and graduates participate in international student exchange and internship programmes by working for profit as well as for non-profit organisations. By providing a platform for leadership development, the ISA offers young people the opportunity to gain leadership experience and participate in the development of the association itself. ISA has its roots in Germany, more specifically in Constance. Originally, it was founded as a local alumni and student organisation under the name of Studentenverein Konstanz (Student Association Constance SAC) on December 8th 1966. Already in the first years after its formation, the SAC became one of the biggest student associations in Germany and with a growing network of contacts, the vision of the SAC changed to a more courageous ideal to change the scope of operation and build towards becoming a global organisation for students. At its 10th anniversary, the organisation declared this new vision of a global organisation under the name of ISA. Due to the new vision, the ISA established new offices all over the world and is still in a phase of growth. Within the last 10 years, ISA established offices in eight countries and gained almost 5.000 new members. Newsday, present in
